The team also selected the best camera angles to capture both the performers and the audience's reactions.

Live Recording

During the concerts, a crew of multi camera operators captured the performance from various perspectives—front row shots, overhead angles, and close ups of the artists' instruments. Simultaneously, a dedicated sound team recorded the live audio, ensuring that every vocal nuance and instrumental detail was captured in full fidelity.

Post Production

Once the live footage was collected, the post production phase began.
